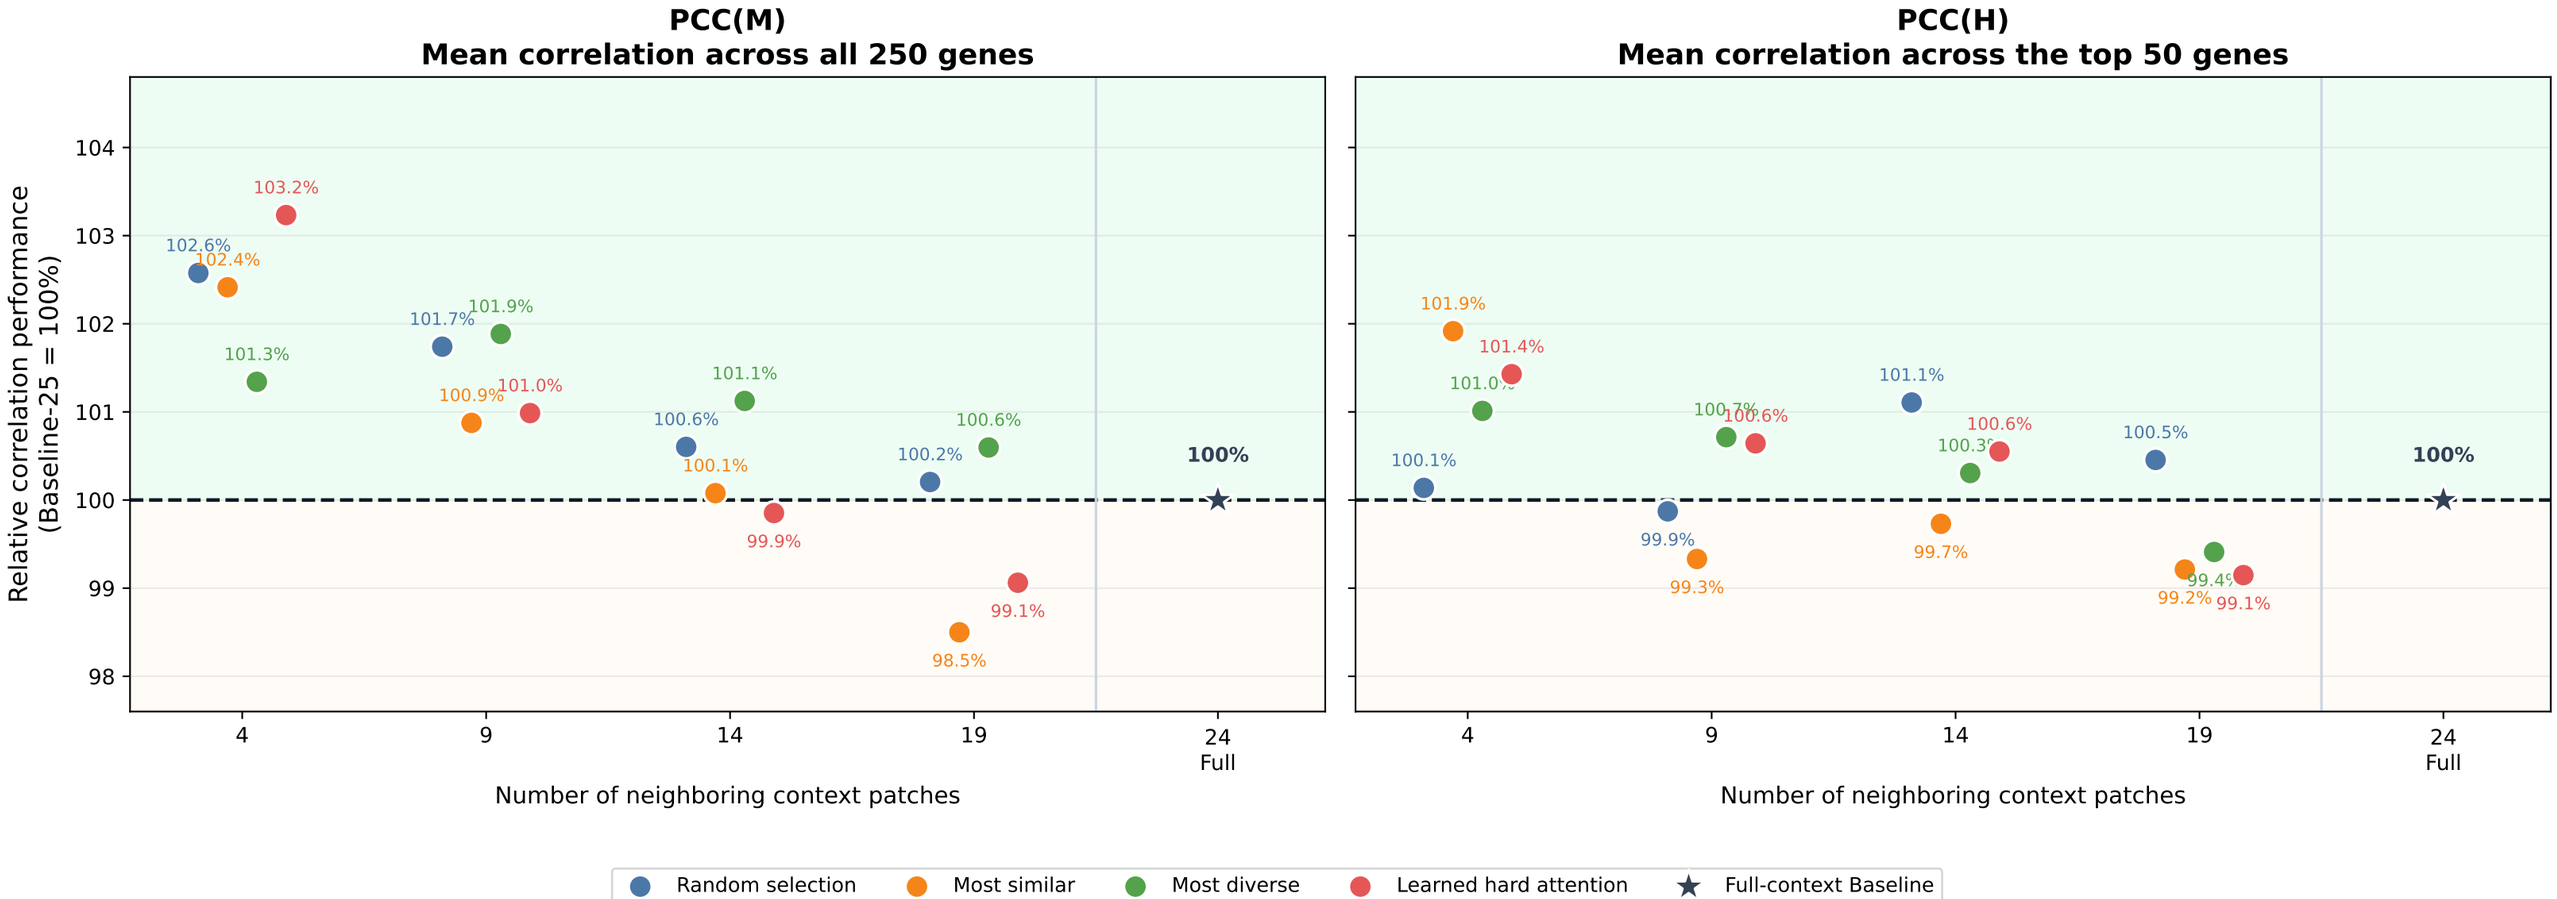
Fewer context patches can preserve gene-expression prediction performance


The central target patch is always included; values are averages across 8 patient-level cross-validation folds